COOLIDGE DRY ORDER IS ABANDONED

Washington, June 9 (I.N.S.).—President Coolidge's much criticised executive order permitting enlistment of State officers as Federal dry agents was abandoned by the Treasury today. Officials announced that State officers would be appointed except upon specific request by prohibition administrators, and added that no requests were pending. Ned Green, administrator at San Francisco, originally made the request that resulted in the order, but has now withdrawn his request for authority to employ State officials and does not intend to renew it.

MR. "BUGS" BAER suggests that farmers, tired of being helped, "now demand some assistance." The Iowa election will make Republicans realize that they

EDICT ILLEGAL

The Federal Government's failure to properly enforce prohibition, all attempts without authority of law to restrict the commissioner of Internal Revenue in the exercise of the appointing discretion vested in him and to prevent as to officers and employees other than prohibition agents, the restrictions upon appointment and qualifications for office illegally promulgated by the executive order of 1922 which Congress amended, said King's report.

WOULD "SERVE 11 MASTERS"

He also attempts without the consent of the States to compel and not merely voluntarily accept their aid and the services of their officers in administering a Federal statute. The appointment of any State of choice to a Federal dry post, King argued, would make him "serve two masters" with the Federal post dominating the State post.

"Any policy, State or national, which tends to break down the barrier separating the Federal government from the States is not only unjust," he added, "but is tainted with unconstitutionality. Any executive order having this effect is illegal."

It is vital to the welfare of the States of the Federal government that the dual form of our government and the separate responsibilities, resting upon the Federal government and upon the States, should be recognized. Any policy which affects the morale of the States and its officials would affect the vitality of the Federal government.

California to Drop New Dry Order as "Useless"

San Francisco, June 8 (A.P.)—Because "its usefulness is likely to be practically destroyed" by the operation of State and local peace officers, the Federal government's plan to deprive local peace officers as prohibition agents probably will be dropped in California.

Colonel Ned M. Green, district administrator, made this statement today.

The position expressed by State officials has caused officials, who otherwise favored the plan, to shy at it, Colonel Green said. "Some are afraid they will lose their jobs if they take Federal appointments."

EFFORT TO BAR
JUDGE FAILS

A motion alleging prejudice and personal bias and seeking on these grounds to bar Federal Judge George W. Anderson from further participation in the New England Oil Corporation litigation, involving millions of dollars and several prominent Boston financiers, was denied today in Federal Court.

The motion, rarely used in the courts here, was brought by Bradley W. Palmer, prominent Boston lawyer. Although Judge Anderson had a right to rule on it himself, he handed it over to others and Judge Morton's denial of the motion today revealed the unusual action for the first time.

Pending over hearings into litigation attendant on the ownership of the oil corporation, Judge Anderson recently ordered that Boston financiers to pay $1,375,000, which was claimed by creditors of the company.

Palmer's motion, following this and other decisions in the case, was contained in an affidavit in which he alleged that Judge Anderson entertained feelings of personal bias against him. Judge Morton in denying it said that the law as regards prejudice was only applicable in rare instances in which the defendant is able to show facts and reasons tending to prove his claim.

Postmarked Brockton, the letter stated: "Mr. Cox, your house is next unless you do the best for our cause. And we warn you not to tell police about this. All we ask is help. You are warned from us who know you." This letter was not signed. It was mailed in Brockton on the eve of a scheduled Sacco-Vanzetti rally, and has terrified Cox, his wife, and four children.

Mr. Cox was formerly an assistant paymaster in the employ of the U. S. White Ship Company in Bridgeport, and was carrying the payroll of $40,000 the morning of December 24, 1925, when it is alleged Vanzetti and three other men, in an automobile, opened fire on Cox and his three guards. Vanzetti was convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison for this crime. He was identified as the man carrying the shotgun. Sacco was not involved.

FOREIGN TRADE OF U. S. GAINS N. Y. TO GREET PAPAL LEGATE

Washington, June 9 (Universal)—The importance of the United States overseas trade to its production and distribution and the urgent necessity of legislation such as is proposed to make permanent the foreign service of the Department of Commerce is probably more clearly seen when it is noted that two-thirds of our copper production, 54 per cent. of our cotton, one-third of our tobacco, 30 per cent. of our wheat, and a large proportion of many of its manufactured commodities reach their final consumption markets in foreign lands.

With our export total rapidly approaching the five billion dollar figure, our foreign trade has indeed become a vital part of our present economic life.

Proper marketing of commodities for export is what enables this country in a large degree to maintain her present standards of living and high wages.

With the efficient co-operation and help of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, the trade of the nation has expanded enormously. Imports and exports are double what they were prior to the war. In 1925, there was a balance in favor of the United States of over $50 million dollars.

Allentown, Pa., June 9 (A.P.)—Charles Garland, head of the April Farm free love colony at Cooperburg, now in jail on a statutory charge, said today that he would not contest his wife's suit for divorce.

Garland was called from the jail yard, where he was playing basketball with other prisoners. He read the Associated Press dispatch telling of the suit, and said: "I will not contest the case. Further than that I have nothing whatever to say on the subject."

RELEASING BIBLE

Garland will be released from jail next Monday. He said he intended going directly to the farm near Cooperburg.

As to further activities at the farm in the line of working out his idea of a free love colony, Garland refused any comment whatever, but appeared excited about his seventy acres of apple and peach trees.

"Those trees are young and need attention," he said.

After his basketball game in the prison yard Garland continued his reading, which takes up most of his time. He has been reading much on religious topics, the Bible being foremost in this list. Recently he has taken to agricultural topics.

HAIRCUT DATES RECORDED IN SLOAN'S BOOK

"Doctor" Earl B. Sloan, divorcee of the illustrious woman whose name was so meticulous that he even entered the dates of his haircuts in his notebooks. Mrs. B. Sloan, his widow, testified today in Suffolk Superior Court, in its $50,000 suit against the estate brought by Charles W. Clark, Sloan's former nurse.

Clark claims that Sloan promised to keep her and his wife in comfort for the rest of their lives in return for his services as nurse.

Notebooks of Sloan introduced by the defense to show his painstaking nature, revealed entries about hair medicine and going to a circus.

His husband always discussed his business with her and paid particular about having important things put in writing. Mrs. Sloan said she denied that she ever influenced her husband against Clark when he entered Sloan's service. Clark, as by as she knew, had never handled her hair of bonds or securities for her husband. While her husband was at life over way about things, it would listen to reasoning.

Testimony of Sloan's ex-wife showed Mrs. Sloan's story that Clark had offered her for $10,000 to operate during a social call made at her house following her husband's death.

This man appeared dazed for an instant after the report rang out, but then joined the other two in flight. PICKED UP BODY. Silva had gone into the wagon before to telephone for help and Christopher said that he, with the help of a man named Lewis, carried the body into the wagon house.

At they picked up the body, Christopher testified, a gun fell from somewhere in Comen's clothing.

Every seat in the Suffolk Superior courtroom was taken and hundreds had been turned away from the door and the corridor lined, when Assistant District Attorney Timothy J. Callahan opened the case of the Government against the three alleged slayers.

WOMEN IN COURT. Seven women were among the spectators, these including the mother of the accused boys, a sister of young Lamburney and three women friends.

Down the benches of Mrs. Tothaker and of Mrs. Lamburney the court bowed without cessation during the charge of Prosecutor Callahan, but the eyes of Mrs. DeShane and Mrs. Lamburney were dry.

Stop by step in his opening, the prosecutor sketched the events before, at and after the Dorchester tragedy that took place on the night of June 2, 1919.

Comen's life without a second's warning, and Attorney Callahan's remarks were emphasized frequently by his soundings on the jury rail.

EXCEPTIONS DEFERRED. "We will show that the statements of some of the witnesses are contradictory and inconsistent," said Judge Shaw, presiding, ruled that objections could be made on a motion at the end of the government's opening and exceptions then taken, if desired.

"Frank J. Comen was a police officer on duty March 24, 1918, in the patrol house on Dickens street, which you saw yesterday," Attorney Callahan began in his opening to the jury.

"He was a regular officer and was in the performance of duty there that night."

"Shortly after 9 o'clock, he was shot down and killed by the defendant, DeShane, who was in company of the defendants Lamburney and Tothaker."

FELL IN GUTTER. "We will show that DeShane fired the shot and after the shot Comen fell in the gutter, a man came along, ran into the house and telephoned. Then two other men came along and took Comen into the patrol house."

"The first man fired Comen and said only one word, so far as the government knows, and that word was 'Up.' He did not remain conscious and was dead when he reached the City Hospital, where he was taken in the patrol wagon."

"These three defendants, as we will show from statements out of their own mouths, were landed together in a series of burglaries and had been landed together in a general cotter to burglaries and rob."

ALL ARMED, HE SAYS. "We will also show that the statements of some of the witnesses at times in some cases all carried out and sometimes only two had them, while the third had not."

"We will show that on that day Tothaker went to work at some place on Summer or Franklin street, Boston, and also that Lamburney worked that day as a clerk or office boy in a real estate office."

"That night all three boys gathered at the house of Lamburney and then went to Matignon, taking a street car at Dudley street or Federal square. They all lived near Dudley street."

"At Matignon they got out of the car and then came toward Boston. When they came to Johnson road, at a house I pointed out to you yesterday, they went to the rear. When they arrived there they had a severe argument which they used as a Jimmy, and a pair of pistols. They out the telephone wire at the house with the pistols."

PRIOR TO KILLING. "Comen was a fully loaded automatic pistol with him at that time and as he had the pistol, one of them went to the front door of the house, rang the bell and asked somebody in."

the apartment above if a certain person lived there.

"The person in the upper apartment came to the door and said 'No.' Then they went upstairs."

"Three young men went to the rear of the house, having ascertained that there was no one at home on the first floor, jimmied a window, got in and took a look at the place."

"Two of them were armed with pistols and a loud speaker, which was to be placed in evidence."

"The loud speaker was placed under the veranda of that house and then they went to Lamburney's house, next street, and stole a Ford automobile, brought it back to the Johnson road house and took away the batteries and loud speaker, then drove toward their own homes."

AT DEATH SCENE. "Some time later we find them on Dickens street where the murder was committed. It appears that before they got to Dickens street they got into a dead-end street where DeShane got out of the driver's seat and Tothaker took the wheel, but DeShane took it back again and was seated at the wheel when the machine was in front of the patrol house in Dickens street."

"While there the car was standing on Dickens street, where the murder was committed, nothing with it. The attention of Comen was attracted by the sound of the car and he went to the back of the car to look at it."

"Then the prosecutor declared that he had evidence that the boys were armed, he asked for license and registration, was confronted instead by guns held in the hands of DeShane and Lamburney and was shot by DeShane when he was ordering the boys to get into the patrol house and drive away."

"The boys, Callahan declared, then through an alley, over the New Haven Railroad tracks and through Park street, and committed a burglary in Train street not more than fifteen minutes later."

THE NATIONAL PARK LINE

TRAIL 5 MILLION SLUSH FUND

Washington, June 9. (U.S.A.)—The Senate's inquiry into the use of "slush funds" in Senatorial primary elections opened today with the recent Pennsylvania election directly under investigation because of charges that $5,000,000 were spent in the three-cornered Republican race for the office of Senator Pepper.

Rep. William S. Vare, who won the nomination, and Gov. Pinchot, who ran a poor third, and Pepper have placed themselves at the committee's disposal.

Corruption officials from the three camps were present under subpoena to reveal the financial arrangements under which their candidates raced for the nomination.

The managers and treasurers of each campaign have denied excessive expenditures in their own ranks, but their testimony is expected to reveal facts which probably will carry the investigating committee on a further inquiry in Pennsylvania.

The Democrats particularly believe that the inquiry will develop interesting material for the November election.

MISSING BOY FOUND
STUNNED BY TRAIN

Although the Malden police were told three times that five-year-old Joseph Broder was missing from home, it came out today, they said, to connect the disappearance with the unidentified five-year-old boy stunned by a train near the Malden street bridge.

Today, the five-year-old, who, although rendered unconscious when he was toppled down an embankment, was found to be injured.

He was identified as little Joe Stodder, after he had been all night at the Malden Hospital, without a name.

Little Joe is a plate ward, who lives at the home of Mrs. Ellen Garrity, No. 4 Russell street, Malden.

DEMOCRATS EXPECT TO BEAT BROOKHART

Des Moines, Ia., June 9.—A. A. Brookhart, the Republican senatorial nominee by about 60,000 votes, Canada, Ia. today, Democratic nomination, hopes to benefit by the Republican defeat of Brookhart, which narrowed the senatorial victory margin in 1922 and resulted in its unseating by Dan F. Hoek, Democrat, as an outcast of the 1924 election. The Democratic hope of defeating Brookhart is based upon such support for F. Hoek as the Democratic candidate against Brookhart and for the organized group of Republicans in Iowa and from the Republican National committee.

CITY COUNCIL IS PRAISED BY IRISH CLUBS

By JAMES WALSH

Resolutions commending the Boston City Council for its adoption of an order protecting the provisions of the so-called "National Origins" laws in the immigration law, were adopted unanimously by the executive committee of the Associated American Irish Societies of Massachusetts. President Richard Dwyer presided at the meeting in Hibernian hall, Church street.

More than a score of Irish societies from various sections of the state, including the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, the Central Council of Irish Social Association, the Corkmen's Association, the Clontarf Men's Association and the Gaelic Association, sent delegates to the meeting.

Several of the speakers declared that the "National Origins" system of designating the quotas from various European countries would result against the American youth, and that it would open the gates to thousands of unemployed, unskilled industrial workers in Europe, especially from Ireland, where large numbers of skilled workmen are out of employment.

Other speakers pointed out that the class of immigrant that comes from Ireland usually is interested more in the agricultural pursuits than in unskilled labor.

Another meeting of the committee will be held shortly.

Reports of the committee in charge of the recent field day of the large Cork Men's Association, will be received at a meeting of the association to be held in Hibernian hall, Church street, next Sunday, resident Matthew Donovan will preside.

The County Clare Association will meet Sunday at 2 p. m. in Mason Building, Washington street, with Rev. J. J. O'Connell.

The annual banquet of the County Clare Association will be held in Hibernian hall, Church street, next Sunday evening. President Michael Ryan will be the toastmaster.

The County Down Association will meet Sunday night in Hibernian hall, Church street, at 8 o'clock. The County Tipperary Association will meet in Hibernian hall next Sunday night. County Waterford Association will have their meeting in St. Rose hall, 17 Worcester street, South End.

B. & M. PLANS IMPROVEMENTS

With an initial expenditure of more than $300,000 scheduled for this summer, the Boston & Maine railroad announced today the beginning of a road improvement program that will extend over three years and cause the employment of hundreds of "idle workmen."

Additional forces numbering 500 have already been assigned to the road's payrolls from several Maine towns and New Hampshire communities and this number will soon be increased to the neighborhood of 800.

The improvement work consists chiefly of rockballasting of the rails to increase the safety and comfort of travel on the Portland division. The Southern division north of Concord, N. H., and the Pittsburgh division. This year's work will be concentrated on 71 single track miles between Oak Grove station, Maine, and Newmarket, N. H., 19 miles between Concord and Geriah, N. H., and 27 miles between Portland and Baker's Bridge on the Pittsburgh division.

LOVE WINS AT WELLESLEY

Sophistication of high education has not warped the matrimonial views of Wellesley seniors. Eighteen of them have announced their engagements and many more who have become affianced during the year will blithely proclaim the fact at the Senior Class Supper to be held June 22.

Prominent among those who have announced their engagements are Sylvia Platts, of Hartford, Ct., who has voted the "most engaged" member of the class; Katherine Adams, of the class; Catherine Adams, of the class; and the Alpha Sigma Chi society; Joan Burnham, of Boston; Gertrude Franklin, of Andover; and Evelyn Cole, Georgia.

PRIESTS GO TO CHINA AS MISSIONARIES

Four members of the Passionist Order attached to St. Gabriel's Mission, Brighton, three of them Greater Boston boys, have sailed for China.

The Rev. Fr. Cormac, C. P., of Dorchester, and the Rev. Fr. Caspar, C. P., of Philadelphia.

The four priests will first go to Mexico City, June 9 (A.P.)—President Calles has ordered three Catholic churches, one each in the cities of Frontera, Merida and Jaena, closed.

One of the churches had been abandoned in protest against the religious causes of the constitution. The other two churches are said to be in excess of the number permitted in their respective localities.

SOMERVILLE MAN HELD ON EXTORTION CHARGES

Robert C. Ormiston, thirty-eight, of Lowell street, Somerville, was held to $5,000 for the Middlesex grand jury today in Woburn court on charges of impersonating an officer and extortion. Robert J. Brown, a salesman of Huntington avenue, and a woman companion identified Ormiston as one of two men who confronted them in a parked auto on a State highway. After threatening them, Ormiston is alleged to have attempted to extort money.

STUTZ MAKING NASH FACTORY NEW RECORDS SPEEDED UP

New records of production and general efficiency at the plant of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, in Indianapolis, are being rewarded with cash gifts, complimentary dinners and expressions of appreciation, to foremen and department heads. The cooperation between the employees and the company has established profitable records, according to Vice-President E. C. Cleveland.

He said: "We produced, assembled and tested 224 engines in one week, and this a record not only for the Stutz factory, but for Indianapolis. Our one thousandth car has been delivered, and this is a little more than 100 working days since the Nash Stutz chassis went to the production line."

MID-WEEK MOORHILLS

By J. HERBERT DODGE, Automobile Editor

OAKLAND CAN'T FILL DEMAND 2 MORE STORES FOR TAUBMAN

In order to meet the rising demand of dealers for more cars, the Oakland Motor Company increased its production schedule on both the Oakland Six and the Pontiac Six. The new schedule will be maintained through June, July and August. The decision to speed up production followed a meeting of district managers at the factory. At no time this year has the Oakland company been able to supply dealers with sufficient cars to meet their requirements, said Frank Brown, general manager of the Oakland Motor Company of New England.

"The sale of more than 10,000 Pontiac Sixes, during the first three months, established a new record which has been maintained by production and sales of more than 30,000 Pontiac Sixes during the first five months of the year."

"The sweeping increase of Oakland sales over the year of 1925 is equally as spectacular. The combined production of the Oakland and Pontiac Sixes has placed the Oakland Motor Company in volume as one of the ten leading automobile manufacturers in the world."

Motor? CONTINENTAL!

There is very little need for further explanation when a prospect asks "What kind of motor in this car," and the salesman replies "Continental."

Behind and beyond the salesman's answer lies a record of achievement that stands out clearly and shapely as a guide post to superior motor performance—a record that justifies future confidence by past performance.

As a result of 26 years of painstaking specialization Continental has reached the point which it occupies today. During this time the company has consistently held to a single purpose—the concentration on the development of Red Seal Motors for every purpose where gasoline power is employed.

So today whether it be the power plant in a passenger car, truck, bus, marine or industrial unit, if it is a Red Seal Continental the user can be sure of unusual motor performance and dependability.

But the real reason for Continental supremacy is organization—8000 specialists in motor building, trained to Continental's exacting methods. Included in these is an experimental organization with every known facility for accurate intelligent research, together with a development organization perfectly equipped for development work under the actual operating conditions of a myriad of users.

As a result Red Seal Continental Motors give to the user all the power, the economy and years of constant, unflinching performance which users of the Continental product expect because it is a Continental Motor.

AMERICA'S STANDARD

BOSTON WEDNESDAY JUNE 1 1955

NEW YORK

the world's greatest single market, is ready and willing to buy your goods if you know how to get in

MANY a manufacturer and sales manager has looked longingly and fearfully at the New York market. The size and richness of this market are undisputed. In its metropolitan trading area are nine million consumers; more than the combined population of the six next largest cities. There is more money here than in seven mid-western states. It is a live market, a buying market, with open mind and quick response.

A Responsive Market

There is nothing difficult about getting into the New York market. The sales manager who fears its size is frightened of a shadow. There is no wall to break down with the power of dollars. There is no prejudice to overcome. The tools are ready and waiting for any manufacturer with a worth-while product to enter this market and gain an immediate foothold, even though he may start on a comparatively small scale. The same effort which would bring success elsewhere will gain even greater results in the New York market if coupled with the tremendous power of advertising in the New York Evening Journal.

Those who hesitate simply do not know this power. They do not know that, dollar for dollar, the New York Evening Journal reaches more readers with greater financial ability and spending intent than any other newspaper in the United States.

An Organized Market

Nor is sales effort difficult. This market is organized as no other. Every city block and every suburban village is charted. Every outlet is known for every sort of product. Sales maps worked out by experts and checked by the most experienced sales managers in the field are available. Complete sales routes which provide utmost economy of time and traveling expense are available. This analysis of the market, this charting and routing, have been prepared by the New York Evening Journal's corps of merchandising experts, in order to enable the manufacturer to use to the utmost the advertising influence of this newspaper.

Quick Sales Response

To any sales manager not familiar with this market we can show low selling cost figures that will amaze him. To any manufacturer seeking a rapid outlet for his goods we can demonstrate a consuming capacity of enormous proportions.

Many a manufacturer has said, "I will not go into New York until I can do it right." That is a fallacy. There is no reason why any manufacturer should not come into the New York market immediately, even though he enters on a small scale, and work it progressively with profitable results from the very beginning. The one essential, of course, is advertising response, and there is no other method of obtaining this response, so surely, so economically, so steadily as by advertising in the New York Evening Journal.

New York Evening Journal Supremacy

Nothing succeeds like circulation. An advertisement must have readers. More than 700,000 people buy the Evening Journal every afternoon and they pay 3c daily and 5c Saturday for it. They take it home, where it is read by approximately 2,000,000 consumers of merchandise. This is America's largest evening newspaper circulation by a great margin. It is 100,000 more than the next two evening papers in New York combined. For 27 years the New York Evening Journal has maintained

Results:

1. Obtained over 50% distribution in 3 weeks.
2. Active co-operation of 10 chain grocers.
3. Quick response from trade in general.
4. Instantaneous reaction from consumers.

New York Evening Journal, November 23rd, 1932.
Gentlemen: It is still a little bit early to state accurately the results of our advertising campaign on Wheatworth Self Raising Whole Wheat Flour in the Evening Journal, but we can say today, after only four weeks of advertising, that the results are far beyond our expectations and beyond anything that we have ever experienced in any previous advertising campaign.
We began this campaign with a full page in color in the Saturday Home Journal on October 24th. The work of securing dealer distribution began only one week previous. A check-up made during the week of November 6th showed that we already had better than 50 per cent distribution of all stores, including chains.
Before the second full page in color appeared in the Saturday Home Journal on November 14th we had sold and secured active cooperation from ten of the leading chain store grocers. Some of these chain stores called us on the telephone on the Monday following the appearance of the full color page, and asked us about the new product before we had time to call on them.
Frankly, the quick response from the trade and the general and almost instantaneous reaction from consumers produced by this campaign are unique in our experience. The work of our merchandising staff in supplementing the efforts of our own sales force has been extremely effective and valuable, and we wish to express our sincere appreciation of your wholehearted support and cooperation.
Cordially yours,
Dean A. Hartwell

The Road to Profits

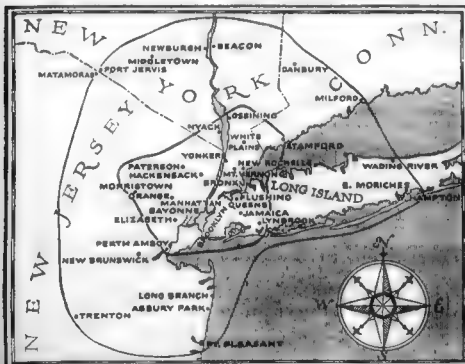

Scores of manufacturers have found that the New York market, reached by the New York Evening Journal, absorbs 25% and more of their output, at a profit margin exceeding that of an equal volume of business done elsewhere. The New York market, rightly approached, is the most profitable one in the country. The Evening Journal offers the one great highway to the heart of it. Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

Budget Talk No. 72
By MARTHA LEE
"I WANT to start a budget, but I don't want my husband to know about it until I get it working," writes Mrs. H. P. M.

And I'm ashamed to reply that budgeting is a family income under these conditions. Team work is the cornerstone of every successful budget and in nine cases out of ten you will find that the man of the house is even keener for budgeting than the woman. He knows that he is a budgeter for his family's well-being and can readily see that it is just as necessary to have a plan for spending the household income.

Budget really knits families closer together for he shows them just what the money of the family is doing. Arguing the man of the house has completed because this is not said the day they are presented budget was when they are paying and later in unavoidable debts. The plan is to make a family budget and make it as possible and make it as far as possible through the month.

Lady 'Throws' the Lawyer

Mr. Whipple Recalls a New Hampshire Advocate Whom His Contemporaries Ranked With Marshall

Visiting his native State on the occasion of its sesquicentennial celebration, to speak on New Hampshire's judges and lawyers, Sherman L. Whipple, distinguished Boston advocate, talked of Webster and Pierce and John Sullivan and many others—Jeremiah Smith, the Weares, the Bells and Ishobad Bartlett—and very likely sent many of the boys and girls in colleges and academies to their reference books by saying:

"Webster is an exception to almost every rule, yet it may well be doubted whether his fame really as a lawyer would have greatly outlasted that of Mason."

Mr. Whipple certainly put the rank of Jeremiah Mason no higher than Webster himself placed it. "If you were to ask me who was the greatest lawyer in the country," the immortal one said upon a certain occasion, "I should answer John Marshall; but if you took me by the throat and pinned me to the wall and demanded my REAL opinion, I should be compelled to say it was Jere Mason." And Rufus Choate said of him that "as a jurist, he would have filled the seat of Marshall as Marshall filled it."

The great advocate, as has been said, is like the great actor; "he fills the stage of his span of life, succeeds, gains our applause, makes his last bow and the curtain falls." We cannot say whether his methods were the right methods; we can only say that they succeeded in their day and that their contemporaries acclaimed them as masters.

Mason must have been physically impressive, too. He was six feet and a half tall. In cross-examination he was unequalled. The student who blows the dust from ancient volumes to read what is recorded of him will be richly rewarded. Nor will it be altogether dry reading, especially if one should come upon the story of a visit to Weeks' tavern in Greenland and the wager laid by Webster that one of the strongly built women employed about the place could "throw" "Brother" Mason in a wrestling bout.

Lamb Didn't Know Clams

Or the "Dimertation" Would Not Have Been "Upon Roast Pig"

One can sympathize with and even stoutly support Mr. Jonathan F. Comstock, of Cranston, in his advocacy of "cleaning up" some of the historical spots in Rhode Island, and yet deeply and most sincerely regret that the gentleman should have gone out of his way to slam the clam.

"Visitors to Rhode Island should be shown something more," Mr. Comstock told the representatives of Chamber of Commerce and Boards of Trade at East Greenwich, "than an old-fashioned Rhode Island clam dinner."

It is more than likely that the gentleman from Cranston "did not expect to be called upon to speak." There was the opportunity to write down a few well-chosen remarks. The clams simply occurred to him. They were brought in, so to speak, if not by the tails at least by the shells.

Rhode Island could not get away from her shore dinner reputation if she would, and would not if she could. On a day in June, nearly 50 years ago, 30,000 persons from all parts of the East went to Rocky Point because President Hayes was there. The multitude feasted upon baked clams. Rocky Point's fame had been growing slowly for 30 years. This day established it. Buttondown Beach merely claimed to be a rival resort.

There is only one way to bake clams and that is the Rhode Island way, with stones for the floor of your oven, plenty of wood, lots of seaweed, a profusion of green corn, potatoes, lobster, and perhaps (or most important) fresh fish, rolled in corn-bushes. Start the tourist in with a banquet like this and he will not mind a little litter in Roger Williams Park, around the grounds of Brown University or in the neighborhood of the Old Stone Mill.

Used Minds Develop

One of those speculations which can never be proved is embodied in the question: "What would have happened to Abraham Lincoln if he had had a modern college education?"

A professor in the University of California, Charles E. Rugh, has given his guess. He thinks Lincoln would never have been heard of.

"If Lincoln had had knowledge heaped on him in the manner that it is heaped on modern youths, his brain," Professor Rugh says, "would have become so befuddled as to be useless to him."

There may be much in that. Lincoln won his knowledge under handicaps by hard study. He not only digested what he studied, but the effect of his studying was steadily to enrich the powers of his mind.

It is the used mind, like the used muscle, which develops. Unless education gets the student to grips with real work, it draws little out and retains little of what is crammed in.

The flabbiness of our day, the willingness of people to be snooked at, herded, hectored, censored, gulled, regulated and preyed on, is doubtless partly due to the lack of early habit of hard thinking.

In Lincoln's time it was necessary for the poor boy eager to advance to win by the best help—self-help.

Today wealth abounds, opportunities team and the easy way is alluring. We cannot say what Lincoln would have been under these conditions, but we can be pretty sure that he would not have been a nonentity.

Safety Is Comparative

After all, safety is only a comparative thing. Nobody is actually safe all the time. Death and calamity stand behind every tree and lurk for us in every breeze.

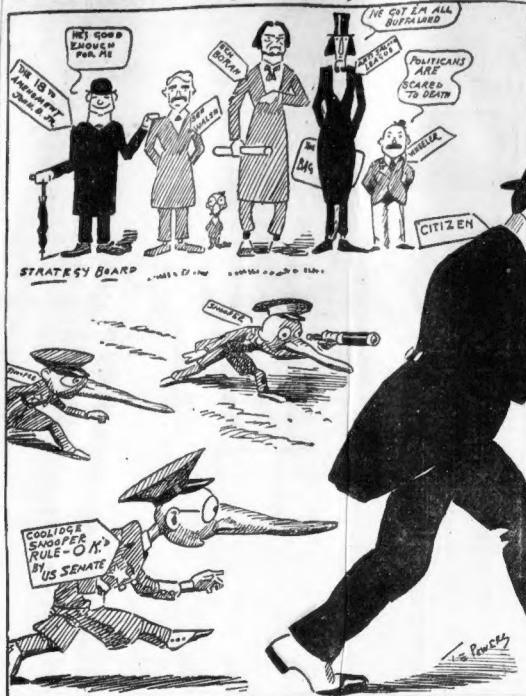

We get a great deal of comfort in traveling, however, when we reflect that on an average there are fewer accidents on the railroads than there are off them.

And now comes the National Safety Council and declares that it is safer on the street than in the house.

It states that within the last few years were killed on the street every day over a given period, sixty-two were killed in the house.

Therefore, if you want to have the greatest average of safety you will get out and take a walk.

Government by Snoopers

ARBITRARY CODES ALWAYS FALLIBLE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

LEON TROTSKY, one of the ablest men in Soviet Russia, has come out for a "return to morality," according to press reports from Moscow.

In an address he advocated a code of morals which opponents termed "Mid-Victorian."

Soviet Russia, swinging to an extreme of personal liberty after the war, has offered an interesting experiment in casting aside moral ideas of the past.

And now in the judgment of one of its most popular men a return to morality is needed.

Morality and arbitrary moral codes are frequently confused.

The wandering sophists of the time of Socrates maintained that the distinctions between right and wrong were set natural and permanent, but merely conventional. That which was right in one region, they said, was wrong in another, and what was wrong under one set of circumstances was right when they were changed.

Rebellious individuals today say to those who object to their conduct:

"You think it is wrong to do this. I think it is all right to do it. My opinion is as good as yours."

Both of these groups are speaking of arbitrary moral codes.

Such codes, laid down by human minds, are always fallible.

Yet, somewhere in the whirlwind of conflicting ideas on right and wrong is the calm of a soundly based true morality.

Entirely apart from an arbitrary religious code of morality is the moral code of nature.

Some things are moral and some are immoral, some are right and some are wrong, and "great argument about it and about" cannot change the facts.

Some repressions are necessary; some control of personal gratifications is demanded by nature. Excess means weakness and indulgence brings incompetence.

The religious moral codes which have endured longest and which will continue to endure are those that are most in line with the moral code of nature.

IF YOU ARE BEATEN DON'T ADMIT THAT YOU ARE

Do you know that you are allowing your face to picture your disappointments from day to day?

Don't do it.

No matter how serious your difficulties do not let the world know that you think you are beaten nor anywhere near the quitting point.

A lot of men in the world today would have failed in their undertakings if people had known their real condition.

Every day you meet men who are putting up a cheerful exterior who are ill or who have grave financial trouble.

They hide their employers know all they would immediately form the opinion that their services could not be what they should be. If in business for themselves their creditors would probably begin demanding payments in full.

If you have ever been a good poker player you know how necessary it is to keep control of your facial muscles so that other players may not know when you are bluffing or when you really have the goods.

Life is a great poker game in some respects. The only way you can give the impression of having confidence in yourself others likely will have the same opinion; but when your face depicts the belief that you are down and out others will soon form the same opinion.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS is a talk for husbands. That means YOU, Jim. It's about the Wife. Funny how she's changed in the last few years, isn't it? Why, when you married her—only five years ago—she was the peppiest little chick in town. Full of ginger—never got tired—used to put in her eight hours down at the office and come out so bright as full of flip as a Spring salmon. Always ready for a cabaret—dance until midnight—keep you all shouting with laughter—and next morning she'd be as fresh as a baby.

Wonderful kid, wasn't she? You thought you had the world by the tail when she promised to be a divorcee. And what the reason of it all?

Veritable Battery. Here it all. What is the matter with her, anyway? Don't you give her plenty of money? Sure you do. Don't you send the washing out—bring a woman to do the cleaning—dress the kids in ready-made clothes—eat the cake and pie? Why, she hasn't half as much work to do as she had down in the office and yet she's a wreck. If things don't get better pretty soon there's going to be a divorce. And what the reason of it all?

Down at the office there were a dozen people around, all busy, all remananting. It was like living inside a battery. It WAS the inside of a battery, for there was an actual electrolytic reaction from all those other energetic personalities laboring together. Your girl was continually recharged with it, realizing it—just as you are continually recharged by contact with other people in YOUR work, Jim.

But in the home there was no such recharging. It's like working inside a vacuum instead of a battery. Every day is so crazy to "get somewhere" when you get home from work. You just get a little back she can't enjoy a nice restful hour.

So you're married and you're the first couple of years everything's all right. But then you get ahead on your job. It sure was a wonderful time. You got to be a regular Married Man—remember how you came staggering home with a vast machine, but it's one pocket and a lawn mower in the other? And the machine you brought together? You worked every night that Summer over the machine. You got about one bunch of radiators out of the whole business. I don't mind. You'd never been so happy in your life. You had the laugh on all

The King and His Medals

Clothes DO Make a Difference

THIS IS GOOD KING GEORGE WHO 'OBEYS HIS PEOPLE' WEARING A FEW OF HIS MEDALS AND DECORATIONS.

This is the latest portrait of King George, exhibited at the Royal Academy in London. Spies forbid printing the whole picture, and so you miss part of the cloak lined with ermine.

But there is enough here to prove the truth of the old saying that clothes make the man—at least, they help.

The cloak is of magnificent velvet and worth a fortune. Every star, ribbon and chain that you see represents some kind of "decoration" supposed to add to the greatness and importance of the wearer.

The king has on only a few; there wouldn't be room, even if you pinned them on his back, to carry the whole collection.

Thousands, perhaps millions, of Britishers can tell you the meaning of each fine ornament of gold and beautiful enamel. Their real meaning, as British statesmanship knows it, is this:

THE PEOPLE RESPECT WHAT THEY HAVEN'T GOT. THEY ARE IMPRESSED BY SHINING CROSSES AND STARS JUST AS OUR RED INDIANS WERE IMPRESSED BY RED BEADS AND PIECES OF BRIGHT CALICO.

There is a great deal in clothes, whether a king wears them to make up for the fact that he doesn't do much else, or whether a young American wears them when he's going out to look for a job, to "present a good appearance."

Don't neglect APPEARANCES. Men judge by the eyes nearly always and in the beginning they judge by the clothes ABSOLUTELY.

Keep up to date. Fortunately, in these days, dressing well doesn't mean extravagance.
